A REJECTED SUITOR.

The staunch but unfortunate island of Newfoundland does not propose to wipe out a debt of gratitude with her "heart and hand." Since the great fire of St. Johns, Canada has contributed some relief money and the Canadian newspapers are seeking to take advantage of the natural feeling of gratitude felt on the part of Newfoundland to take her into camp. "Newfoundland has offered slights by no means small or trivial to Canada," says the Toronto "Empire," she rejected all friendly political negotiation, "prevented our fishermen from obtaining the bait they required, while freely admitting their American competitors, and did everything that was possible to show her government's dislike and prejudice against the Dominion." But Canada is willing to forgive all, and "we sincerely trust," adds the "Empire," "that the revived good feeling may never again be broken, and that it may prove significant of a still closer and better union."

Canada ought to be ashamed to make capital of such an act of humanity.

The Millennium.

If the theories of Edward Bellamy could be made practical this world would be about as good a place to stay indefinitely as the imagination could picture. Boston is always ready to test a new theory and Bellamy clubs have already been established there. Everybody is more or less interested in the ideas amplified in "Looking Backward" and which has created a great sensation all over Europe especially in England.

Its doctrine may be defined broadly as the practicability of so systemizing labor in the aptest and pleasantest employment of every member of the community, by the people acting in the capacity of the government, that universal and wasteful competition shall be superseded by universal and economical co-operation, thus excluding the necessity for money, and modeling the State after that of the family, caring for its weak members, and securing as cheaply as possible in the amount of labor expended, all the comforts, enlightenment and joys of a high and constantly improving civilization.

Some fault is being found with General Weaver for the way he goes about the country speaking and taking up collections. All in all this seems a very good idea. He has no Wall Street sack to back him and he pays for every mile he travels on a railroad. The people furnish the sinews of war for his campaign and this seems to be the proper thing. If elected the people who have contributed all the way from 25c to a $1.00 will have the satisfaction of knowing that they helped to contribute the funds to make a poor man President of the United States. Not a dollar of Wall street gold has ever touched Weaver's hand.

Pythian Sisters.

A Temple has been instituted in Virginia City which will be known as "Silver Temple No 2 of Pythian Sisters." It is the second Temple of the kind in the State and par a charter membership of thirty-seven names. Mrs. Lizzie A. Miller Deputy Grand Chief, assisted by Mrs. Walter Davis, performed the instituting ceremonies. Both ladies are members of Crescent Temple No 1 of Austin, Nev.

A watering cart broke loose in Virginia yesterday, and paralyzed the town. Virginia people don't like to see water running around loose.
